1. The International Patent Classification (IPC) is a hierarchical system for classifying patents. It is used by the International Patent Cooperation Treaty (PCT) to classify international patent applications. The IPC is divided into four main sections: A (Arts and Manufactures), B (Technology), C (Chemistry and Metallurgy), and D (Physics and Mathematics). Each section is further divided into subclasses, which are then divided into groups. The IPC is used by the International Patent Cooperation Treaty (PCT) to classify international patent applications.
